ReadPlus Handbook

What is Readplus?

ReadPlus is a database of over 10,000 titles that the editors have read and recommend or titles that have come from trusted sources. It contains picture books, young novels, novels, adult fiction and lists of films organised under subject headings. There are also links to author URLs, review URLs, lesson plans and book trailers. A special feature is the Read Similar Author lists and the Read Similar Books lists for selected titles.

Age ranges are approximate. It is the responsibility of the user to become familiar with the content of titles to discover whether the material is suitable for a particular clientele.

It is updated on a regular basis, usually weekly or fortnightly. Books that have been reviewed in the previous week are added in, keeping the database very relevant.

The editors are pleased to consider recommendations for the inclusion of titles. If you would like a list to be compiled or a search for teacher sites on a particular title, send an email or fax and we will endeavour to include relevant titles and sites in the database. If you would like similar authors or titles added to particular books please send a request

Subscribing

The school or institution subscription allows ReadPlus to be used across the campus. The username and password may be sent home for use by students. A unique URL is given to each subscriber the link may be placed on an Intranet or book marked on stand-alone computers. IP addresses can also be entered to allow use on computers without having to log in.

Communication is via email. If you wish to change username, password, email contact us to have it changed. An occasional newsletter is sent out to subscribers containing news and information about what has been put into the database. It is sent only to the email address given, but additional people can receive it if necessary. Email office@carelpress.co.uk with additional email addresses.

Home page

The home page contains information about books and reading.

1. Book reviews

Approximately two or three book reviews of recently published books from many publishers are published on the front page of ReadPlus each day. The age range of the books that are reviewed is from toddler to adult.

A band of reviewers is comprised of teacher librarians, librarians, and a group of teens. Pat Pledger edits the reviews. Some times a book will be reviewed more than once as publishers may send more than one copy.

Books that are particularly good will be given a “Recommended” or “Highly recommended” rating. Books reviewed by the teen group may be given “Recommended” or “Highly recommended” if it is particularly appealing to that age group.

There is a panel of rotating covers to highlight books. The reviews stay on the front page for approximately a week but can be accessed from <http://www.readplus.co.uk/blog.php>

2. News

The news blog features information about the book world. It particularly features news about book awards around the world as well as author and reading information.

3. Features

The features blog has animated films of some of ReadPlus features.

Features of ReadPlus

1. Many titles will have additional information as well as publisher details, date and subject headings. These include links to author home pages and to author blogs.

2. Read similar authors/ Bookmarks

Other features include a list of Read similar authors, which can be printed off as a bookmark. These can also be printed onto a poster. An animated film of one title is available at http://www.readplus.co.uk/features\_detail.php?id=26

3. Templates for bookmarks and poster

A template for the bookmarks and poster is available at <http://www.readplus.co.uk/templates.html>

Another way of using this feature is to list the authors on a shelf divider next to popular authors. A Word or Excel document with a listing of the authors and titles that contain a bookmark is available. Contact info@readplus.com.au

5. Read similar books

Many books, especially classics and very popular series will have a list of Read Similar books. These could also be made into posters. See below for a listing for Twilight.

Ways to use ReadPlus

1. Put up posters around library reminding users that ReadPlus is available. Posters are available at <http://www.readplus.com.au/templates.html>

2. Encourage students to use ReadPlus as a way of finding new authors and similar books.
3. Compile lists of fiction for teachers around the topics that they are using in the classroom.
4. Use the Read Similar Books lists to make a list to give to teachers when they are using a book as a class set.
5. Give teachers lists of lesson plans and resources for a particular title if it is a class set. Remember that we will compile resources for particular titles if they don't already have them.
6. Make bookmarks promoting Read Similar Authors and leave them at the circulation desk.
7. Paste lists of similar authors next to books by popular authors. Shelf dividers or old video-cassettes covered with coloured paper could be used.
8. Use the genre lists to select titles for a display on eg Horror, Mystery, Fantasy etc.
9. Use subject lists to make displays of topics like Vampires, Steampunk, Film of the book.

Note: Posters are available from Carel Press, that would make it easy to do quick displays. Give a volunteer access to a subject list and a poster and have a quick way of regularly changing small displays. A poster list is available https://carelpress.uk/library\_posters

10. Use Wordle to create interesting lists using the Read Similar Author or Read Similar Titles entries. They also could centre around a genre or a particular author.
11. Use the author entries to make a poster for an author. It could contains a list of works, author blog, author sites, interviews and reviews.
